Harrington Emerson of the Standard Fractice and Efficiency Engineers had a new plan to promote efficiency in work if e gave the title of his speech as "Justice, common Sense and the Payroll." He said that under the present system there was often a brutal and unseemly struggle between labor and capital. No matter what happened, the workers generally got the worst of it. He declared that under the contract system the foreman said was "not far from New York."

Briefly stated, this plan was discovered by noticing the ease with which one workman in this factory, a weaving concern in which all the employees were foreigners, did work which other's declared was too much for them. He received a bonus weekly after the firm talked with him and aided to put in operation the plan by which each employee who earned the bonus increased the output. No one was threatened with discharge for not reaching the standard, but each one was asked to try. By degrees all the employees were able to earn the bonus and the man who by his ability started the new order of things received an additional bonus. It was proposed to introduce the system, which simply meant intelligent work, he said, in railroad and other shops. He insisted that it was simply laden with historic associations. Were not the victors of Greece and Rome crowned that, and recently have declined to take with laurel? Had not poets sung its praises from time immemorial?

"It is peculiarly appropriate to be a national flower," he continued, "first because it is a hardwood plant and lasts year after year. In favored places it becomes a tree, but like liberty, it is a hardy thing and will persist under the most adverse conditions.

most adverse conditions.

"It is colored with complementary colors, the red and green, and therefore it unites the extremes of colors, as we unite here in America, various extremes. The flowers are red and white—two of the colors of our flag—and the third color, green, is blue warmed by the addition of a little yellow, the symbol of wisdom, so that blue, truth, becomes green, the symbol of fruitfulness."

The speaker then explained that another qualification of the flower for our national emblem, lay in the fact that the flowers.

The police of the Hamburg avenue station were notified and detectives arrested Mrs. Bellock at the home of her married daughter at 248 Varet street. She told the police that the child's death was accidental and she made the same statement in court. She was released on bail for a hearing on January 27.

LEARNS THE WAYS OF ALIMONY Ziegler Wins His Divorce, But Stays in

Jall for Not Nourishing His Wife. Herman Ziegler, a grocer, has been in Ludlow Street Jail since last October pecause of his failure to pay his wife alimony pending a suit for divorce he brought against her. The case was called before Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum yesterday, and in order to testify for himself Ziegler had himself taken to court on a writ of habeas corpus. The jury returned a verdict in his favor. Ziegler's time is up next Tuesday, and he went before Justice Goff after he had wen his case and asked the Court to let him out immediately. The Court sent Ziegler back to jail to finish out his three months.

Another Pell Family.

The number of Pells in New York was nereased by one yesterday when Harry Pelinsky, a contracting plumber, permission from Supreme Court Justice Page to take that name. He said that although he is a Polish Catholic many persons have taken him for a Hebrew, and for that reason it has been difficult for him to get credit.

DEGAN IN PINIPLES

When Two Weeks Old. Would Water and Itch. Broken Out Most on Face. Used Box of Cuticura Ointment and Nearly Cake of Cuticura Soap. Was Completely Cured.

"My little girl had eczema on her face which first started to break out on her when she was two weeks old. It began in pimples, and would water and itch. It was, on the back of her neck in the edge of her hair, and in between her shoulders. But it was broken out the world. Send to Potter Drug & Chem.
